It's Go Time!

You want three things from a vacation—women, booze, and adventure. Behold, 10 places that'll deliver you to the altar of the holy trinity of travel.

Maxim, May 2006
 By Jordan Rane

MIAMI Florida

Pam Anderson's hot in your town. Here she's an Elks club pinup.

BABES

We didn't dream of growing up to be firemen or cops. We dreamed of growing up and rubbing lotion on tomorrow's starlets as they work on their all-over tans on South Beach (SoBe). It's good to have attainable goals—and even better to cruise a beach packed with the most sizzling collection of aspiring talent this side of Hollywood.

BARS

Tobacco Road (305-374-1198) earned its best-bar status the honest way: by being open for 88 years, holding Miami's first liquor license, getting raided by cops, and being the city's best live blues club, with cheap beer and a sick BBQ pork sandwich. If you don't stop here, just get it over with and become a Mormon.

BANZAI!

When you board a 50-foot sportfishing boat with Mark the Shark's Monster Fishing (305-759-5297), a big-ass hammerhead shark isn't the only thing you can reel in. "We get hot chicks from South Beach on the boat all the time," says Captain Mark the Shark. "The girls are into it as much as the guys these days—I've seen some guys hook up pretty good."

BAY ISLANDS Honduras

Two islands, one party.

BABES

"Everyone's here for two reasons: getting drunk and getting laid," says D'Arcy, 34, a dive instructor on Utila Island. "You have to be seriously impaired not to get some here." According to the locals, there are three lies told every day in Honduras: "I'm leaving tomorrow," "I'll stop drinking today," and "I love you." Practice them all on the outgoing Italian hotties who pack the beaches.

BARS

Roatan Island bars like Twisted Toucan close early—but you've been chugging mango coladas since noon, and you'll be 75 feet underwater in six hours. For rum and cokes on Utila, hit Bar in the Bush.

BANZAI!

Eighty-degree, 100-foot-visibility water, and scuba certs for less than $200 (pay with your widely accepted U.S. greenbacks) make the Bay Islands official understudy for the Great Barrier Reef. Dive (or just sleep, eat, and drink) with pros, like American-friendly Anthony's Key Resort (800-227-3483), and you might swim with a whale shark—the biggest fish in the sea, but with none of that bull-shark attitude.

PHOENIX Arizona

More than rattlers will sink into you in the Arizona desert.

BABES

In five years the cream of the sun-crisped Phoenix crop will be the bored trophy wives of the pro golfers in nearby Scottsdale. "The women are older in Scottsdale," says 29-year-old local businessman Tyler, "but they're still beautiful and loaded and desperate. You get a couple of cougars out there, but good-looking ones." The more playful cubs swarm the Arizona State University campus in Tempe, half of whom are skipping class right now to work on their tans.

BARS

A few blocks off of Tempe's Mill Avenue pickup scene, McDuffy's (480-966-5600) sets the bar with 70-plus TVs, 50¢ Corona nights, off-track betting, and a built-in music venue full of future ASU bedmates. Days in Scottsdale begin with early afternoon margaritas on the patio at Dos Gringos (480-423-3800).

BANZAI!

Driven by U.S. Marines and other hard-asses, Desert Storm Hummer Tours (480-922-0020) takes you on a half-day assault through Arizona's desolate sandscape. The night ride—you get to wear an ITT GEN 3 Night Vision Scope!—begins when the temps dip below 120 and the tarantulas are starting to bite.

CAYE CAULKER Belize

The other Caribbean.

BABES

A scuba and suntan haven by day, dinky Caye Caulker has Belize's best beach scene. But even the world's ultimate slacker isle—there's a reason the phones almost never ring here—gets up and throws down after midnight. Bronzed tourist girls and bootylicious locals (an African-Maya-Creole-pirate mix) take off even more clothing at the island's only decent nightclub (just ask for "the disco"), among the coastal Caribbean's most reliable pickup spots.

BARS

On Caye Caulker, not having an open Belikin beer in hand after 9 A.M. is just rude. Later, hit I&I Bar, a lazy tree house with hammocks and the kind of kick-back atmosphere you and your buds crave whenever Peter Tosh comes on the stereo.

BANZAI!

Deep in the nearby Guatemalan jungle, the Mayan ruins of Tikal are tucked away more secretly than your ex's phone number. Hop a 45-minute flight from Caye Caulker to Tikal base camp, Flores, and it'll be you and 2,600-year-old pyramids, temples, and howler monkeys. Tropic Air flights leave daily (800-422-3435). Bunk at the Jungle Lodge (call Belize Explorer Travel, 011-501-824-3740) to catch sunrise before the "They filmed Survivor here" day-trippers move in.

TALLINN Estonia

Say "tere" to Europe's latest party capital.

BABES

More than half a million lava-hot Scandinavian tourist women will flock to the city this year in sexy blonde hordes. You can also hunt for locals, including future Eastern European supermodels and the talent in a medieval lesbian stripper show in Tallinn's old center, Toompea. Half the fun is saying it.

BOOZE

Tallinn's old town is jammed with bars like Club Hollywood, filled with drunk tourists sent by Tallinn Pissup (tallinnpissup.com), a travel agency that'll point you to great local beers and the aforementioned lesbo gig, described by one guy on the company's Web site as "a 10 out of 10."

BANZAI!

Tallinn Pissup will hook you up with activities that are borderline illegal in your town, like occasional demolition derbies and firearms training at Dr. Death's Military Academy. "Between the guns, women, and nightlife, it's a weekend I'll never forget," says Ben, 24, another oddly delirious visitor.

SYDNEY Australia

Hey, they still like Americans here! (Sort of.)

BABES

They're fun. They're friendly. They're flattered you came halfway around the world just to watch them drink you under the table. They can also wrestle alligators and catch dingoes while wearing ass-hugging jean shorts, then talk about life down under with their charming accents. Don't worry, mate, you'll get used to those.

BARS

Honor the proud legacy of Sydney's founding fathers—exiled 18th-century Brit drunkards and felons—by guzzling the city's best microbrew at its oldest pub, the Lord Nelson Brewery Hotel (011-61-2-9251-4044); or refuel at Bourbon & Beefsteak Bar (011-61-2-9358-1144) in Sydney's little Amsterdam, Kings Cross.

BANZAI!

The world's best helicopter pub crawl leaves Sydney for drinking holes across the rugged New South Wales countryside. West crawls (there are also North and South options—collect all three for a free mug) hit the Comet Inn, a classic pub with a pet kangaroo named Boomer. (Sydney Helicopters, 011-61-2-9637-4455)

MOSCOW Russia

The city where vodka is the tonic.

BABES

"It's absolutely true whatever stories you've heard about how many hot women there are here," says Don, a 29-year-old Moscow-based businessman. With almost as many local billionaires under 40, there's stiff competition. But nothing a 10-ruble subway ride can't solve: "Miss, could you tell me when this train stops at Preobrazhenskayaploshchad station? And join me in paying tribute to sweet Mother Vodka when we get there?"

24 Hours to Live: Will Arnett

"If you look around," says Tom, 29, another lucky American in Moscow, "you won't find a single woman you wouldn't want to sleep with." Doug & Marty's Boar House (011-7-95-917-0150) is an expat shrine with absinthe and ribs on the menu, satellite games on TV, and hovering mail-order brides. The Real McCoy (011-7-95-255-4144) has a packed dance floor and barely dressed girls armed with shot-glass bandoliers and tequila bottles.

BANZAI!

Like an ex-president cleaning up on the speaking tour, Russia's putting its otherwise wasted supertechnology where its fattening wallet is these days. You can try your skills as Maverick's nemesis by flying a MiG 25 over the Moscow skies at 80,000 feet and Mach 2.4 speeds for a totally doable $13,750. Too rich for your filthy capitalist blood? Half an hour in a MiG 29 goes for a prole-friendly $10,200 (flymig.com, 888-359-6442).

MONTREAL Canada

Finally, a reason to stop bashing the French.

BABES

Forget the "poor man's Paris" rep. This freakishly festive city dedicated to hot women and shitty sports teams is closer and has a far better temperament. Montreal's dark-haired beauties don't care what kind of car you drive—just having one's good enough. "Montreal women are beauty minus the attitude," notes Boris, 33, a local film producer. "They exude a sexuality you don't see in the rest of Canada."

BARS

Steering east of joints filled with Boston frat boys on the Crescent strip gets you to the St-Laurent scene—where Blizzarts, A GoGo Lounge, and Boa are places to work on your Franglais pickup lines till 3 A.M., when news of after-parties spreads like brush fire.

BANZAI!

If you like white water, just not a whole day of it with some jagoff in the stern screaming at you to paddle, try Lachine Rapids Tours (514-284-9607). For $50 you can shoot the rapids of the St. Lawrence River on a high-powered jet boat. Just aim for the side when you toss your cookies.

BARCELONA Spain

And you thought the city's first three letters were a fluke.

BABES It's not like we're ready to push American girls to the curb. But there's something about hangup-free señoritas who party till five in the morning that we can't get over. "It is common to have one-night stands here," notes Laia, 26, one of the first female Barcelonians we talked to. "Many young people still live with their families, so there's no place to go. Cars are very popular."

BARS

Your all-night crawl begins at Bar Marsella (011-34-93-422-7263), reputedly the city's oldest drinking joint and a must-try absinthe den. With tons of places to pound sangria, Las Ramblas, the crowded pedestrian tourist promenade, is home to a cleaner circus of trouble-seeking European women. But go to Danzatoria (011-34-93-211-6261) for a crop of angels who send sinners directly to heaven.

BANZAI!

Featuring 99,000 rabid fans at Nou Camp, Europe's most maniacal soccer grudge match—FC Barcelona vs. Real Madrid—is as frenzied in the stands as on the field. If whiny fútbol players in kneesocks don't impress you, jump out of a plane on the Costa Brava, Europe's best skydiving training ground. Skydive Empuriabrava (011-34-972-45-0111) welcomes first-timers...with release forms.

SANTIAGO Chile

Wine, women, and snowboards.

BABES

Santiago is so secluded you'd expect a gene pool smaller than east Tennessee's. The truth is, Chile's capital is the best-looking mutt in the Americas—filled with Spanish, Italian, German, French, and Serbo-Croat goodness, and more fake blonde hair and hidden piercings than a Tokyo modeling agency. You know a city is cool with the nasty when even the espresso is served by girls dressed like porn stars. Ask directions to the nearest café con piernas ("coffee with legs"), legendary coffee bars where caring staffs in pumps and G-strings dispense caffeine and flirty smiles. Makes Hooters look like Chuck E. Cheese's.

BARS

After years of looking, we've finally stumbled across the best place in the world to buy feisty 18-year-olds pisco sours without getting arrested. Gyrate with your new girlfriend and South America's friendliest live-for-the-weekend locals at rows of no-name bolero-techno joints in Barrio Bellavista.

BANZAI!

Heli-skiing packages are a peso-saving bargain at Valle Nevado, one of the Southern Hemisphere's biggest ski resorts, just 40 miles from town. Or drive the extra couple of hours to world-renowned Portillo (800-829-5325), a perennial contender on those top-10 ski and snowboard resorts in the universe lists. Widow-maker 50-degree pitches here have laid claim to world speed records; seven-day, all-inclusive packages should ruin you a few grand. Plunked down in a bowl of towering, snow-covered peaks, the heated outdoor pool at Hotel Portillo (011-56-2-263-0606) will ease the pain of your shattered femur.

Ask Us Anything

Q: When were passports invented, and who came up with the design?

A: Though evidence suggests primitive passports were holding guys up at customs in Jesus' time, world citizens were permitted to travel more or less freely between countries until World War I. After the war nitpickers at the League of Nations came up with the standardized guidelines that determined what our current docs look like. Since 9/11, security has gone tight-shorts. Border security measures currently in development involve biometric technologies like facial and eye recognition. And you thought 1984 would never get here!

Fight Attendants

Meet the least helpful cabin crew ever.

Little Pill

On a Northwest Airlines flight, the mom of a 19-month-old spotted powdery specks floating in her baby's juice. It turned out to be crushed Xanax provided by flight attendant Daniel Cunningham, sentenced to four months home confinement just for trying to help the little tyke sleep.

Bombs Away

On a 2004 American Airlines flight from Dallas, flight attendant Gay Wilson found a note that read, "There is a bomb on board this flight to Boston in cargo. Live Saddam." Wilson eventually admitted she'd written the note, but didn't say why.

Russian Hospitality

Two stewards on a Moscow-to-Nizhnevartovsk flight attacked a passenger for accusing them of being drunk. An exam later proved that the stewards were indeed heavily intoxicated. How anyone noticed this on a Russian airliner was never explained.

Off Day

An off-duty South African Airways steward got wasted on an SAA flight and was fined 100 rand for swearing at passengers, biting people on the arm, and kissing a Chinese woman. In Shanghai that's called Saturday night.
